

Computer Administrative Rights Criteria

Computer administrative rights should be granted only when:

- Campus Technology staff has determined that there is no other method of providing the user with the ability to run specific software.
- When the course outline requires the installation of software by students, faculty teaching this course may need administrative rights.
- The requester's job description requires him/her to install, update or repair a computer.